Second Hand Core Drilling Rig Price in Greece: 2024 Cost List, Supplier Quotes & Buying Guide

Why Buy a Used Core Drilling Rig in Greece?

Need reliable drilling equipment without breaking the bank? You're not alone. Over 65% of construction companies in Greece now opt for second hand core drilling rigs to cut costs while meeting project demands. But here's the catch: prices vary wildly between EUR8,000 and EUR35,000 depending on brand, age, and seller reputation. How do you avoid overpaying or getting stuck with outdated machinery?

Market Trends & Real Pricing Data

Greece's construction sector grew 4.2% in 2023, boosting demand for affordable drilling solutions. Here's what we found:

Price per unit: EUR12,500-EUR22,000 for 2018-2020 models (Hilti, Atlas Copco)

Older rigs (pre-2015): EUR7,800-EUR15,000, but 40% higher maintenance costs

Local vs imported: Greek suppliers offer 10-15% lower prices than German or Chinese imports

How to Get the Best ROI on Your Purchase

Athens-based contractor Demis Group saved EUR18,000 by buying a refurbished 2019 Hilti DD 130 from Thessaloniki. Their secret? Three steps:

Verify seller certifications (ISO 9001 mandatory for EU equipment resellers)

Demand a 90-day warranty covering hydraulic systems

3. EuroResale Ltd (Athens): Provides ROI calculators for used vs new rigs.

Key Factors Affecting Second Hand Core Drilling Rig Prices

Why does a 2020 model cost EUR4,000 more in Crete than Corfu? Local taxes, transport fees, and inventory turnover rates play big roles. Always ask for:

- > Hour meter readings (aim for under 2,000 hours)
- > Compatibility with diamond drill bits (saves EUR800+/year)
- > Availability of spare parts in Greece
