Second Hand Drilling Bits for Sale in Argentina: 2025 Price List, Quotation & Buying Guide

Need affordable second hand drilling bit prices in Argentina? With mining activity up 12% since 2023 and inflation hitting 211%, operators are scrambling to cut costs. Used drilling tools can save 30-60% versus new equipment - but only if you know where to look. This guide reveals current market rates, trusted suppliers, and mistakes to avoid when buying.

Why Argentina's Market Demands Second Hand Drilling Bits Now

Argentina's mining sector requires 18,000+ drill bits annually, but new imports became 27% pricier after China's 2024 export tax reforms. Local workshops in San Juan and Catamarca now stock refurbished second hand drilling bits at $200-$1,200/piece based on size (3-12 inches).

Real-World Cost Savings: Taca Taca Copper Mine Case

In March 2024, a Santa Cruz-based operator saved $184,000 by purchasing 60 used TC-4116 tricone bits from Germany. They paid $850/piece ($51,000 total) instead of $3,900 each for new units.

2025 Price Trends: What to Expect

Standard 6" used PDC bits: $480-$670 (up 8% since Q1 2024)

12" refurbished tricones: $1,100-$1,500 (stable)

Bulk deals (50+ units): 15-22% discounts

How to Get Reliable Quotations Fast

Top Buenos Aires suppliers like Minera Sur and DrillTech offer same-day pricing if you share:

Bit type (roller cone/PDC/diamond core)

Required certification level (API/ISO 9001)

Delivery timeline (2-8 weeks for customs)

Pro tip: Ask for video inspections of second hand drilling bits before paying. Reputable China-based sellers like Kingdream provide this free service despite the 10,000-mile distance.

3 Red Flags When Buying Used Bits in Argentina

1. Prices below $180 for 8" bits (likely unrepaired cracks)
2. No borehole footage from previous usage
3. Suppliers refusing escrow payments
