Second Hand Drilling Bits for Sale in Chile: 2024 Price List, Supplier Quotes & ROI Guide

Why Second Hand Drilling Bits Are Dominating Chile's Mining Sector

Need affordable drilling tools for copper exploration? You're not alone. Chile's mining industry requires second hand drilling bits for 78% of small-to-mid-sized contractors, reports the National Mining Society. But finding reliable suppliers and fair prices in Chile feels like panning for gold in a dried-up river. Let's break down exact costs, trusted sellers, and how to avoid overpaying.

2024 Price Trends: What You'll Actually Pay

Average prices for used drilling bits in Chile dropped 12% last year due to:

Surplus stock from Australia/Canada mines

Local suppliers like Minercorp Chile offering C=190,000-C=420,000 CLP ($200-$800 USD) per piece

New tax rebates for recycled mining gear

3 Insider Tips to Get the Best Deals

Jorge's Antofagasta drilling crew saved 31% on bits by:

Bundling purchases (50+ units) for wholesale pricing

Using pre-inspection checklists from SERNAGEOMIN (Chile's geology service)

Negotiating ROI-based contracts with Santiago-based traders

Red Flags in Chile's Second Hand Market

A Copiapo buyer lost C=5.8M CLP on "graded" bits that failed hardness tests. Always demand:

? Supplier certification (look for CSIC Chile members)

? Drill bit lifespan data

? On-site pickup options to skip import tariffs

2024 Supplier Comparison: Costs & Quality

Minerva Equipment Co. leads with C=325,000 CLP/unit and 6-month warranties. But for bulk orders (>200 pieces), Andean Mining Tools offers C=283,000 CLP with free sharpening services. Pro tip: Ask about "lot mixes" - combining 40% premium and 60% standard bits slashes costs by 22%.
