

Second Hand Rock Drill Prices in Indonesia 2024: Price List, Supplier Deals & Buying Guide

Second Hand Rock Drill Prices in Indonesia 2024: Price List, Supplier Deals & Buying Guide

Looking for second hand rock drill prices in Indonesia? You're not alone. Construction and mining companies across Jakarta, Surabaya, and Kalimantan are turning to used equipment to cut costs while meeting booming project demands. But with prices ranging from $3,500 to $12,000 per unit, how do you avoid overpaying or buying unreliable gear?

Why Indonesia's Market Demands Affordable Rock Drills

Indonesia's mining sector grew by 15% in 2023, driving urgent demand for affordable heavy machinery. New rock drills from brands like Atlas Copco or Sandvik can cost $25,000+ - a steep price for small contractors. That's why second hand rock drills now make up 40% of all equipment purchases in the country, according to the Indonesian Mining Association.

Problem: Hidden Costs & Quality Risks

Many buyers report issues like:

Undisclosed machine hours (e.g., a "5-year-old" drill with 8,000+ operating hours)

Missing certifications from suppliers

2024 Price Trends for Second Hand Rock Drills in Indonesia

Current price per piece depends on three factors:

Brand: Used Japanese (Komatsu) drills cost $6,500-$9,000 vs. Chinese models at $3,500-$5,200

Age: 2020 models sell for 55% less than new units

Supplier Type: Local dealers add 12-18% markup vs. direct imports from China/Germany

Case Study: How a Sulawesi Contractor Saved 34%

PT Tambang Rakyat cut costs by purchasing three used rock drills from a Jakarta supplier offering:

- 2021-model Hydraulic drills: $8,200/unit (vs. $14,000 new)

- Free shipping to Makassar

- 6-month warranty

Total savings: $17,400 - funds redirected to hire 12 local workers.

Getting the Best Quotation: 3 Insider Tips

1. Compare ROI: A $7,000 drill with a 2-year warranty often beats a $5,000 "as-is" unit.
2. Ask for ISO 9010 certification - 68% of reliable suppliers have it.

3. Negotiate bulk deals: Orders of 5+ units can drop prices by 8-12%.

Supplier Spotlight: Direct China Imports Rising

Chinese platforms like Alibaba now offer second hand rock drills shipped to Indonesia for $3,800-$6,300/unit - 20% cheaper than local options. But verify customs duties (avg. 11% in 2024) before buying.

Need a price list tailored to your project? Contact trusted suppliers in Jakarta or Surabaya this week. Most provide same-day quotations - and remember, the dry season (May-September) is peak buying time. Prices jump 7-9% once rains slow mining operations.
