Second Hand Rock Drill Prices in Saudi Arabia 2024: Cost List, Quotation & Reliable Supplier Deals

Need second hand rock drill equipment for mining or construction projects in Saudi Arabia? With mega projects like NEOM and Qiddiya driving demand, contractors face two problems: soaring equipment costs and tight project deadlines. Let's explore how affordable used rock drills can slash your expenses while meeting Saudi Arabia's booming infrastructure needs.

Why Second Hand Rock Drills Dominate Saudi Markets

Saudi Arabia's construction sector grew 6.8% in 2023, with $120 billion allocated for giga-projects. But new Atlas Copco or Sandvik rock drills cost $15,000-$40,000. That's why 63% of contractors now buy reconditioned rock drills priced 30-60% lower:

Portable hydraulic drills: $4,800-$9,200 per unit

Diesel-powered crawler drills: $12,000-$18,500

Spare part kits: $700-$1,200

Case Study: Riyadh Contractor Cuts Costs by 44%

Almabani General Contractors saved $68,000 on their tunneling project by purchasing 3 used Furukawa rock drills from China-based supplier SINOVO. Maintenance contracts and 6-month warranties ensured smooth operations.

How to Get the Best Price & ROI

Follow this 3-step buying guide to avoid risks:

Verify equipment history: Demand hour meters, service records, and hydraulic pressure test reports

Compare supplier quotes: Chinese sellers offer 15-20% lower prices than European counterparts

Negotiate bulk deals: Orders over 5 units often get 8-12% discounts

2024 Market Trend: Saudi VAT Exemptions

Good news! The Saudi government now exempts used construction equipment imports from 15% VAT if sellers provide ISO 9001 certificates. This could save you $2,250 on a $15,000 drill purchase.

Need a custom price quotation? Top suppliers like Zoomlion and XCMG offer live video inspections. Pro tip: Ask for FOB Shanghai prices to compare shipping costs to Jeddah or Dammam ports.
