Second Hand Rock Drill for Sale in Norway: 2024 Price List, Supplier Deals & ROI Guide

Second hand rock drill price in Norway ranges between EUR800-EUR4,500 in 2024, depending on condition and brand. Want to slash equipment costs without sacrificing performance? Let's break down why Norwegian contractors are switching to refurbished rigs - and how YOU can save 30-60% on your next purchase.

Why Norway's Construction Boom is Driving Demand for Used Rock Drills

Norway's tunnel and mining projects grew 17% in 2023 (Statistics Norway). But new equipment costs hit EUR8,000-EUR20,000 per unit. Smart buyers now target certified second-hand rock drills from German or Chinese suppliers. Case study: Oslo-based Nordic Construction AS cut drilling costs by 40% using refurbished Sandvik units.

2024 Price Factors: What Impacts Your Quote?

Three things decide your price per piece:

- Hydraulic vs. pneumatic models (hydraulic costs 25% more)

- Wear parts replacement history

- Local supplier stock - Bergen warehouses offer 15% discounts vs. Oslo

How to Avoid Costly Mistakes: 2024 Buying Checklist

Last year, 1 in 5 used drill buyers in Norway overpaid due to hidden issues. Follow this ROI-focused buying guide:

- Demand ISO 9010 certification for refurbished units

- Compare wholesale prices from EU and Asian suppliers

- Ask about Norway's VAT exemptions for recycled machinery

Supplier Deals You Can't Ignore

Leading dealer RockMach (based in Trondheim) offers free 6-month warranties on second-hand rock drills. Their Q2 2024 promo includes:

- o Free hydraulic oil change (value: EUR120)

- o 10% discount on 3+ units
